

FILE REF: DOM-7741 / MULTIVERSE DIVISION / SEALED YEAR 1402

THE FORBIDDEN PROPHET

SPECIAL CLANDESTINE EDITION

PROHIBITED • OMEGA-BLACK

Nine Relics. Nine Worlds. One Sealed Truth the Ministry Buried for Six Centuries.

What follows are the classified acquisition records of eight inter-universal relics, recovered under the Multiverse Disclosure Act. These files were sealed by the Department of Mysteries following the Convergence Event of 1402, in which the great wizard Aldric Pemberton first documented the existence of parallel universes and immediately locked the evidence in a vault. For six hundred years, no Ministry official has officially acknowledged what Pemberton found. That changes now.

CO-AUTHORS: R. B. Weasley, Deputy Minister • H. Granger-Weasley, Chief Unspeakable PENALTY: Azkaban, minimum 20 years, if distributed without authorization clearance.

CONTENTS OF SEALED DOSSIER

I	Mjolnir — The Hammer That Called Its Carrier	WEAPON
II	Xavier's School — The Sanctuary Across the Veil	MONUMENT
III	Kokushibo — Upper Moon One, Threat Assessment	VILLAIN
IV	The Chosen One — A Prophecy That Does Not Belong Here	ORIGIN
V	Kruger — The Commander We Did Not Know We Needed	MENTOR
VI	Itachi Uchiha — The One the Prophecy Was Always About	ICON
VII	Evolution — The Philosophy That Explains Neville Longbottom	PHILOSOPHY
VIII	The Mobius Chair — Everything That Was, Is, and Will Be	TECHNOLOGY
IX	The Chronicle — I Solemnly Swear I Am Up To No Good	PRIVATE SEAL

Mjolnir: The Uru-Forged Hammer and the Enchantment That Rewrites Power

An Asgardian weapon sealed in the Unspeakables' vault since 1402. Analysis of its worthiness enchantment suggests it does not measure power. It measures something the Ministry has no instrument to quantify. The hammer arrived in the Department of Mysteries under circumstances the Unspeakables have, characteristically, declined to fully document.

What is recorded is this: on the fourteenth of March, 1402, the wizard Aldric Pemberton, Senior Unspeakable, author of the suppressed treatise On the Permeability of What We Call Reality, returned from a classified expedition to a dimensional rift in the Norwegian Sea with three artefacts and an expression his colleagues described as "permanently altered." Mjolnir was the first of the three.

The enchantment upon the hammer, examined over two weeks by Pemberton and his assistant Rowena Vayle, was unlike anything in the known catalogue of magical binding. Most enchantments restrict by design—they limit who may use an object. This enchantment does not restrict. It elevates. It asks not who are you but what have you chosen to be. The hammer will not move for ambition, raw power, intelligence, fear, or the grinding pressure of necessity. Pemberton attempted to lift it for nine hours and failed entirely. His assistant, who simply reached out on an instinct she could not explain, lifted it to shoulder height before releasing it in alarm.

Ministry Annotation (H. Granger-Weasley): The worthiness enchantment resonates with Hogwarts' Sorting mechanism at a frequency our instruments cannot measure. Both systems appear to assess not the person's current state but their fundamental direction of will. Handle with the full awareness that it will judge you.

ORIGIN	Forged in Nidavellir by dwarven smiths; enchanted by Odin Allfather in a dying star.
MATERIAL	Uru metal. Located in DOM-Vault 777 Sub-level Omega (Omega clearance).

Xavier's School for Gifted Youngsters: The Institution the Ministry Refuses to Acknowledge

A school that shelters those the world fears. The Ministry sealed records of its existence in 1402. The irony of a government that runs Azkaban choosing to suppress records of a school built on compassion is not lost on this analyst.

The second artefact Pemberton brought back from the Norwegian rift was a record—architectural plans, student files, a curriculum document, and a founding charter for an institution in Westchester, New York, in a universe where certain humans are born with abilities their world calls mutations. The school was built on the premise that these individuals deserve education, safety, and the knowledge that their abilities are not defects. The Ministry of Magic's response in 1402 was to seal the records immediately; the minutes have been redacted entirely, except on Pemberton's personal copy.

What makes this acquisition valuable is the institutional philosophy it embodies: that extraordinary ability is not a burden on the society around it but a resource for it, and that the only ethical response to the arrival of extraordinary children is to ensure they have the tools to understand themselves. The Ministry, which has spent centuries treating Squibs as embarrassments and Muggle-borns as interlopers, would do well to spend time with this document.

Annotation (H. J. Potter): I read the Xavier School founding charter at 2 AM on a Tuesday and thought about every child who was told their magic was wrong rather than unusual. We acquire this record not as a curiosity but as a correction. The institution endures because the idea behind it—belonging is not earned, it is owed—cannot be destroyed by architecture.

Kokushibo - Upper Moon One: Active Threat Assessment, Full Dossier

This is a threat assessment we commissioned because the entity known as Kokushibo has made contact with our universe. Kokushibo (Birth name: Michikatsu Tsugikuni) is Upper Moon One of Muzan Kibutsuji's Twelve Kizuki—the most powerful demon in his universe after the Demon King himself. His fighting style, Moon Breathing, is a derivative of Sun Breathing and consumes light as a combat mechanism, meaning he operates best in complete darkness, which he generates at will.

He crossed into our universe through a dimensional rift that opened during the retrieval of the Chosen One origin record. He is an OMEGA threat level. He is a demon of extraordinary power who was, once, a human man, and who chose power over everything else with such completeness that the choice became irreversible. The tragedy of his history does not reduce the danger of his presence.

Critical Intelligence (R. B. Weasley): Kokushibo has stated that he intends to demonstrate the supremacy of absolute power by dismantling Hogwarts completely. He has given no timeline and shown no interest in negotiation. I am recommending immediate escalation to CONVERGENCE PROTOCOL.

COMBAT SPEC	Moon Breathing (16 Forms). Generates bladed crescent arcs extending range by up to 30m.
CAPACITY	Speed exceeds Apparition. Regeneration renders conventional spellwork ineffective. Killing Curse: UNTESTED.

The Chosen One Origin Record: A Prophecy From a Galaxy Far Away

When Pemberton sealed this record in 1402, it read as a static historical document. In the past six weeks it has begun generating new text. The Chosen One prophecy, as it exists in the Star Wars universe, concerns Anakin Skywalker—born without a father, possessing the highest midi-chlorian count ever recorded, designated to bring balance to the Force. He fulfilled it eventually, but the cost was everything that made him Anakin.

This changed weeks ago when Chief Unspeakable Granger-Weasley examined the document during the Kokushibo threat assessment. A second prophecy appeared in an ancient, unrecognized runic script in the margins of the original.

[Unspeakable Ledger Update] Further analytical scansion reveals that this runic ink reacts directly to localized cosmic disturbances. It is now hypothesized that the parchment does not simply record destiny across realities, but acts as an inter-universal tether, forcing converging timelines to produce an active counterbalance whenever a high-tier threat breaks reality boundaries.

Runic Marginalia: "The one who carries the weight of a thousand secret griefs, who served without recognition and sacrificed without witness, who died once in the service of love and was returned—he is the answer to the thing that consumes the light. The Chosen One of foreign stars chose balance. This one chooses something older."

Annotation (H. Potter): I initially assumed it referred to me. It does not. The Department has identified the subject of this prophecy. His file is Case No. DOM-7741-VI. Read it.

Commander Anubis Cruger, S.P.D.: The Military Mentor We Requested

The Kokushibo threat revealed a critical gap in Ministry defensive capability: we have excellent wizards and no military commanders. Kruger is the latter. The request for his operational profile was submitted by Deputy Minister Weasley after recognizing that Kokushibo is a warrior of extraordinary ability who has spent seven hundred years doing nothing except becoming better at destruction.

To counter this, we need someone who has trained people to face things they are not equipped to face and made them equipped anyway. Kruger is the Commander of Space Patrol Delta and holder of the Shadow Ranger morpher. His record of training the dysfunctional B-Squad Rangers into an operational team that defeated invasion forces is legendary. His foundational belief: no recruit is expendable, and no person who still has something to fight for should be abandoned.

[Tactical Evaluation Addendum] Initial friction between Cruger's strict standard operating protocols and the traditional, looser formations of the Auror Office has entirely dissolved. His daily combat drills have forced our vanguard to understand that magic is an execution of intent, which, without spatial and physical discipline, falls apart under the speed of non-magical kinetic combatants.

Operational Note (H. Potter): Cruger has been conducting training sessions in the Atrium every morning from 0500. He has identified structural weaknesses in our defensive formations that we have been carrying for fifteen years and never noticed. He will stay until the threat is addressed.

Itachi Uchiha - The Uchiha Clan's Greatest Tragedy

We paid the highest price for this file. This is not an acquisition; it is a recognition. Itachi Uchiha: ANBU operative, Akatsuki member, defector, traitor, hero, murderer, protector. Every description is accurate and completely incomplete in isolation. The full picture requires patience—the same patience Itachi displayed every day of the fourteen years he spent being despised by the brother he loved most, doing a role that required him to be a monster, in service of a mission that could not be acknowledged.

At thirteen, Itachi was ordered to eliminate his own clan to prevent a coup that would have triggered a massive war. He chose the option that preserved his brother Sasuke's life at the cost of his own humanity and reputation. He spent his remaining years in a criminal organization as a deep-cover asset, unable to reveal the truth. He died before Sasuke knew the truth, having never been thanked, and never once asking to be.

[Psychological Synthesis] What the Unspeakables find most remarkable is the lack of any residual ego or desire for personal vindication within the Subject's spiritual blueprint. His core engine is pure, unadulterated duty, executed through total self-abnegation—a psychological architecture that aligns seamlessly with the absolute parameters required to wield the ultimate cosmic artifacts without falling prey to corruption.

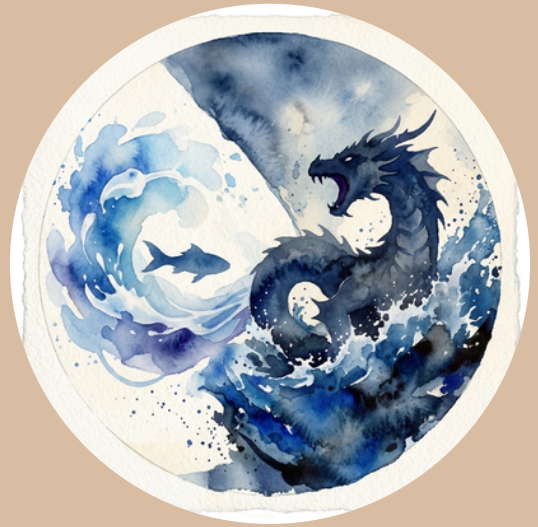

Prophetic Analysis (H. Granger-Weasley): The new prophecy reads: "who served without recognition and sacrificed without witness, who died once in the service of love and was returned." Itachi died and was restored by the Impure World Reincarnation technique. The phrase "died once" is literal. He is the subject.

Evolution — The Pokémon Philosophy of Transformation

A philosophy acquired from a universe of creatures who transform visibly, permanently, and only when they are ready. In the Pokémon universe, evolution is triggered by experience, by bonds formed between creature and trainer, and by the creature's own choice. It cannot be forced or rushed. A Pokémon that evolves before it is ready functions at a fraction of its potential.

The philosophical import applied to the broader question of growth: you cannot become what you are meant to be before you have done the work of becoming it, and the work cannot be performed by anyone else. Power handed to someone who has not earned the ground beneath it is a corruption.

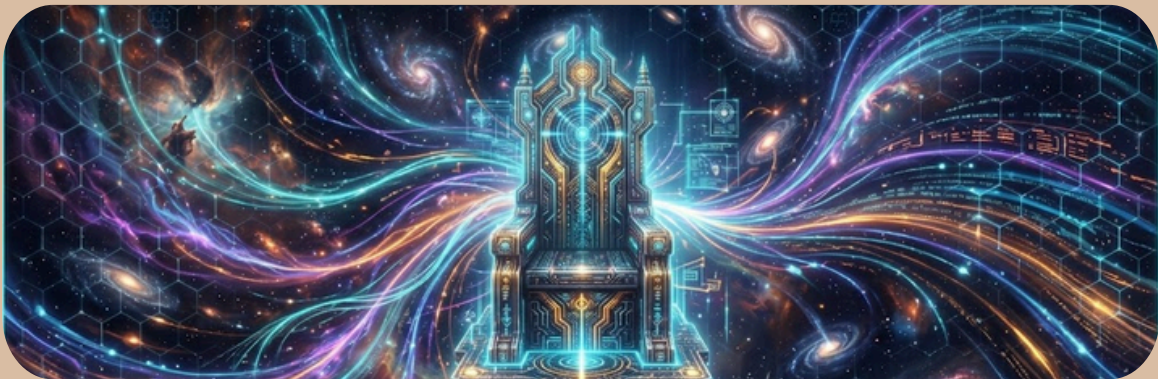

This is why Kokushibo, who chose a demonisation shortcut over the patient labor of becoming a swordsman, is what he is. This is why Itachi, who paid every cost in full, is the answer the prophecy reaches for.

[Esoteric Summary] The Département notes that this doctrine directly challenges classic pure-blood magical determinism. True power is not a fixed, inherited baseline of blood status, but an active, metamorphic state achieved only through targeted hardship, making it a critical ideological weapon to re-educate a fractured post-war Ministry.

Personal Note (R. B. Weasley): Harry once told me that he never felt ready for any of it. I told him none of us do. That's the Magikarp thing, isn't it—you don't feel like Gyarados until you already are one and someone else has to point it out. We should put this philosophy where the Wizengamot can read it.

The Mobius Chair - Metron's Throne of Omniscience: The Weight of Knowing Everything

The Chair knows everything. This is a precise description of its function, and access is restricted to Omega clearance because most minds are not structured for the full weight of omniscience. The Mobius Chair is the conveyance of Metron, a New God who travels outside normal parameters in pursuit of pure information, serving as an interface with the total informational content of all universes: past, present, future, and potential.

The limitations are entirely psychological. When Batman sat in the Chair and asked who the Joker really was, the answer nearly rendered the world's most disciplined human mind non-functional. The Chair does not calibrate or filter; it answers completely or not at all. For our operation, it can show us the exact brief window in his seven centuries of existence when Michikatsu Tsugikuni is closest to the surface.

Operational Note (Granger-Weasley): I have used the Chair twice. The first time for Kokushibo's movements. The second time I accidentally asked a personal question and it answered that too. The operator must be someone who is very, very good at asking only what they mean to ask.

FUNCTION	Omniscient knowledge interface; all timelines simultaneously accessible.
REQUIREMENT	Physical contact with the Chair. Responds with degraded function.

The Battle of the Forbidden Forest: The Convergence Alignment

Harry reached the heart of the Forbidden Forest first under a blood-red moon. Kokushibo stood among the ancient trees, his six glowing eyes cutting through the darkness. "You are the one they call the Chosen One," the demon said. "A powerful story, but it is finished. You are not the answer." Harry raised his wand into a firm defensive stance. "I know. I'm just here to hold the line until the answer arrives."

Behind the tree line, the convergence began. In the castle courtyard, the Mobius Chair flared to life. Hermione sat in it, calculating a tiny forty-seven-minute window when Kokushibo's blade arcs would waver. Simultaneously, Commander Kruger arrived in full Shadow Ranger morph, deploying S.P.D. tactical formations: "Potter, your left flank has been open for fifteen minutes. Move right. Force him toward the edge."

At the thirty-second minute, Itachi Uchiha arrived from the north, his Sharingan active. Kokushibo unleashed his Sixteenth Form—a massive storm of bladed crescent arcs. Itachi stood in the center and cast Tsukuyomi. The crescent arcs froze. Inside the illusion, Kokushibo stood in a room with his brother Yoriichi for five hours and forty-five minutes. When released, the demon dropped to his knees, his absolute conviction fractured.

Mjolnir drifted sideways through the smoke and stopped in front of Itachi Uchiha. Itachi looked down: "Michikatsu Tsugikuni, I know what it is to destroy your own lineage in the service of what you believe is necessary. I know what it is to be defined by the worst thing you ever did, even when it was your only available act of love." He reached out and took Mjolnir's handle. The hammer blazed with pure lightning, judging him completely worthy. The brilliant light filled the Forbidden Forest from edge to edge. Kokushibo raised his sword in respect, then set it down into the earth.

Harry unfolded the Marauder's Map, watching new ink write itself: "The world is never ready. The people in it are ready, or they are not... We assembled the answer, and a man who spent seven hundred years becoming what grief makes of you finally put his sword down." The dawn came quietly. Kruger and Itachi stepped back through their rifts. Harry smiled, tapping the parchment: "I solemnly swear that I was up to no good. Mischief managed."

PRIMARY CATALYST	Convergence Protocol 1402 (Active Inter-Universal Alignment)
RELIC INTERACTION	Mjolnir asset recognition successful; subject Itachi Uchiha designated completely worthy.
CURRENT STATUS	RESOLVED — Entity Michikatsu Tsugikuni neutralized via psychological pacification. File Archived.